Best security in history at convention

Record Convention Bureau
MIAMI BEACH — The
tightest security in the history
of any national political convention will be in effect
today when the Republicans
move into Convention Hall for the opening session.

One Republican official, Fred
C. Scribner, who is general counsel of the GOP committee,
said gate crashers won't have a chance this year. And he said he doubts that counterfeiters
will succeed in duplicating
admission tickets as they did
in San Francisco four years ago.

"Security was tight even before the secret service moved
in," Scribner remarked.

This year, for the first time,
all the candidates have personal
protection from at least 20
agents. In addition, the hall itself will become something of a fortress with security forces
from a dozen law enforcement agencies checking delegates,
guests and members of the press corps from top to bottom
as they enter the gates.

Trouble rumors
Scribner said there are
"rumors" of trouble brewing on Wednesday, the day when the nominations begin. Officials, of course, are concerned about demonstrations outside the hall
and they are more concerned
than ever about interlopers in "demonstrations" the traditional
within the hall as each candidate is nominated.

Those impressive badges of bygone days are strictly souvenirs now. They won't get anyone into the hall. Delegates and those with legitimate business inside must have a pass which is color-coded to match the day of the week.
They are printed by a special process that is supposed to be counterfeit-proof.

Persons bearing packages can expect to be stopped and anyone leaving the hall will be stamped with a fluorescent ink
visible only under ultraviolet light. To re-enter the hall, a person must have both the imprint and the stub of his entry pass.

Hundreds of private police in street clothes will be scattered around the grounds and throughout the hall.

Javits 'monumental'

GOP platform victory for Rocky

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Record Convention Bureau

MIAMI BEACH — The proposed Republican platform is an ideological triumph for the Rockefeller wing of the GOP and a flat rejection of the "status quo" in almost every area of public policy.

"They have drafted a platform that we can win on and I want to run on," Rockefeller declared in a statement praising the "New leadership" solutions advanced by the platform drafters.

A Massachusetts delegate, Rep. Margaret Heckler, said
the contribution to the platform by New York Sen. Jacob Javits in the closed-door sessions was "monumental" and helped to produce a balanced document that either Richard Nixon or Gov. Rockefeller could embrace.

Praise for Javits

"Senator Javits did more to shape policy than almost any other individual," she said. "He led the discussion of many issues and injected a spirit of intellectual tolerance
that was infectious and spread to those on the other side of the spectrum, like Sen. John Tower of Texas."

"It was not just the thrust of Javits' arguments or the persuasiveness of his ideas," she continued, "but his

Rocky pushing hard for Keystone votes

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The Pennsylvania delegation held its first caucus here Sunday night
only hours after the last delegates flew in by specially chartered planes for the 1968
Republican Convention.

The half-hour caucus, held in the Diplomat Hotel, was devoted mainly to housekeeping
details, but Gov. Raymond P.
Shafer, chairman of the delegation, announced
afterwards that the group had voted unanimously to hear representatives of all three Republican presidential candidates.

Shafer said that California
Gov. Ronald Reagan had asked to be heard "personally," but he was not sure whether New York Governor Nelson
Rockefeller and Richard Nixon would appear in person or send a representative.

Speakers at caucus

Among those addressing the delegation's first caucus was former Gov. William W.
Scranton, who reportedly called upon the delegation to unite
behind its leadership. Shafer,
a strong backer of Rockefeller,
has reportedly been putting considerable pressure on the delegates to vote for the New York governor.

The Pennsylvania governor
continued to predict "a wide open convention" and claimed that Rockefeller was the one candidate who could assure the Republican party a victory in Pennsylvania next November.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania is predicting that 50 of the state's 64 delegates
at the Republican convention

will vote on the first ballot for Rockefeller.

The Senator, a strong Rockefeller supporter, claimed in an interview that support for Nixon was slipping and that three delegates have switched,
with still another in the process
of "shifting" to Rockefeller.

The claim is contested by Nixon's Pennsylvania
supporters, however. They say the former Vice President has the backing of 25 to 34
delegates.

Scott is one of six former Republican National Chairmen
who have been working hard to swing the convention to Rockefeller. He and other Rockefeller men are emphasizing the "coat-tail"
benefits if the governor is nominated.

The Pennsylvania senator
said there was "an excellent chance" that the state
congressional delegation would be captured by the republican party if Rockefeller became the head of the ticket.

At present there are 14
Democrats and 13 Republicans
as Keystone State
representatives in the House.

Scott cited polls showing Rockefeller a winner over Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey
in populous Allegheny County by a margin of 46,000 votes. He also said the New Yorker would lose the heavily Democratic city
of Philadelphia by relatively few votes.

With conflicting claims of
voting strength in Pennsylvania,
it was not all clear during
the weekend what the final tally
would be when voting begins
on Wednesday.

Arlin W. Adams, head of the Nixon forces in the state,

reportedly has given pro-Nixon delegates permission to vote for Rockefeller on the first ballot
in deference to Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, who is strongly in the New Yorker's camp.

In the 15th congressional district that includes Monroe County, the two delegates have said they are uncommitted. But Mrs. Barbara Y. Benner of Allentown is said to be leaning to Nixon, while John D. Wood of Bethlehem is inclined toward Rockefeller.

Three Pennsylvania figures
are playing prominent roles in the uphill battle to nominate Rockefeller. They are Scott,
Shafer, and Scranton.

The former Governor, who was the candidate of GOP moderates at the 1964
convention in San Francisco,
has been working at the Rockefeller headquarters in the Americana Hotel.

Rep. James Fulton of Allegheny County, a leader of the pro-Nixon forces, told newsmen Sunday that his latest poll of the delegation showed 25 "sure" votes for Rockefeller and 20 "sure" votes for Nixon.
He also claimed that eight or nine others were leaning toward Nixon and that the tide was turning toward the former vice president within the delegation.

Among Pennsylvanians here
for the convention are James Joseph of Stroudsburg and his wife and Paul Henderson, sheriff of Lehigh County and Republican candidate to oppose
Rep. Fred B. Rooney in the November election.

Peace plan put in GOP platform

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.
(AP) — Republican platform drafters offered the party and the voters Sunday
a peace-in-Vietnam plank
that rejects "camouflaged
surrender" and pledges vigorous negotiations "as long as they offer any reasonable prospect for a just peace."

The completed platform,
seemingly built to order for either Richard M. Nixon or Nelson A. Rockefeller to run on,
charges that "our heavy involvement in Vietnam" stems
from a breach of faith by the Democratic administration.

The key plank commits the GOP—if the National Convention approves the platform
Tuesday—to "a progressive de-Americanization of the war,"
greater South Vietnamese responsibility, and a settlement
"based on the principle of self-determination, our national interests and the cause of long-
range world peace."

For the home front, the platform that was finally hammered out at 3:15 a.m. by a weary Platform Committee
headed by Sen. Everett M. Dirksen promised:

Crime—A vigorous drive
against the narcotics traffic,
racketeering, and the organized underworld, and re-establishment of "the principle that men
are accountable for what they do."

Cities—"We will not tolerate violence" in the cities, the platform said. It called for decisive action against civil disorder and measures to alleviate frustrations that breed violence and despair. The platform also endorsed a variety of housing programs, including help for home ownership by the poor, and attacks on air and water pollution,
transportation shortages and
other urban problems.

Youth—Action to reduce the time a man is liable to military draft and ultimately to replace the draft by a volunteer force.
The platform endorsed 18-year-
old voting laws by the states,
urging those with higher age requirements to change them now.

Inflation—Describing inflation
as a robber, the platform promised fiscal integrity and sound monetary policies. It said control by Congress over federal expenditures should be tightened, and taxes should be reformed and simplified. Tax reduction was promised when Vietnam money demands lessen.

Paratroops locate hoard of money

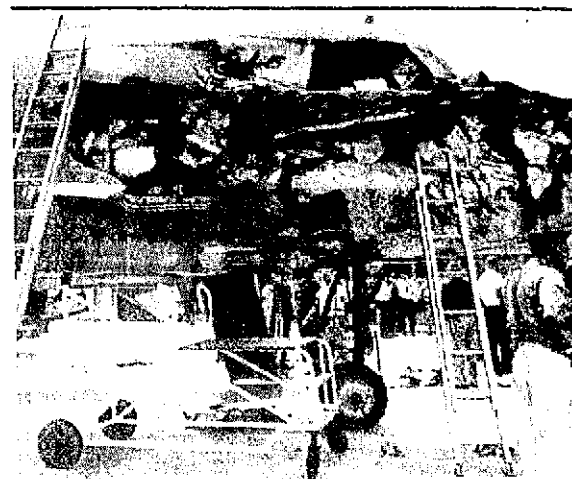

SAIGON (AP) — American
paratroopers searching enemy
caves along the coastal lowlands have found the largest Viet Cong money hoard of the war—containing $150,000 in U.S.
currency, military headquarters
announced Sunday.

Officials said documents
found with the money indicated
it was to be used for war supplies and rice. The cache also contained 935,000 Vietnamese piasters worth $7,923.

One U.S. spokesman specu-lated that the money had been obtained "on the international money market." It was discovered July 31 by a unit of the 173rd Airborne Brigade on a routine search near the coastal town of Phu Mau 200 miles northeast of Saigon.

U.S. sources said the Viet Cong prefer to deal in American dollars in South Vietnam because they are more stable than piasters. Despite an official ban against possession of U.S. dollars by American servicemen stationed in Vietnam, large quantities of dollars circulate in the Vietnamese black market.

Meanwhile troops of the U.S.
25th Infantry Division were led to a weapons cache Sunday by one of the five Viet Cong prisoners apprehended during a combat sweep 15 miles northwest of Saigon.

Mid-air collision claims three lives

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — A North Central Convair with 11 persons aboard collided with a private plane over southeastern Wisconsin Sunday, then limped 20 miles to a safe landing with the smaller plane and its three dead passengers embedded in the airliner's forward compartment.

"We didn't even know we'd hit another plane," said 17-
year-old Wilma Koss of Saginaw, Mich., who was riding in the left rear section of the North Central plane, which carried eight passengers.

Miss Koss, who was traveling with her grandfather, Otto Korkein, 78, also of Saginaw, to visit relatives in Wisconsin, said
the impact "was pretty loud—it
shook the plane."

"But nobody panicked," she told newsmen at General Bill Mitchell Field.

First Officer John Mazur of Wheaton, Ill., was the only one hurt aboard the airliner. He was taken to Milwaukee County General Hospital with multiple fractures of his right leg and head cuts. His condition was listed initially as critical, then as serious.

Milwaukee authorities, who took the bodies of the victims to the county morgue for identification, said that they included a man, a young woman and a boy.

They said the man carried documents belonging to Ricky
Lynne Stenberg, 39, of Elk Grove Village, Ill.

Capt. Ted Baum, 43, of Skokie, Ill., refused to talk to newsmen after bringing the turbo
prop Convair 580 in for a landing with the small plane's wreckage still lodged between the flight deck and the starboard engine.

Two of the four blades on the
engine's propeller bore nicks
from the collision.

Detective Ed Sharon of the Milwaukee police department
said that the pilots told authorities that they were flying northwesterly at 3,500 feet near Wind Lake, in southeastern Wisconsin, when the private plane
appeared suddenly on their right, then veered into the liner.

The plane, North Central Flight 261, was out of Chicago's O'Hare Field en route to Manitowoc, Wis., with a stop scheduled at Milwaukee.

Pope Paul VI offers defense of ruling

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy
(AP) — Pope Paul VI defended
Sunday his encyclical banning artificial contraception, but admitted for the first time that he understood the opposition
which the ban touched off
throughout the world.

At the same time, the Pope
showed no signs of relenting.
He declared the decision in his contested encyclical "Humanae Vi-tae" (Of Human Life) "is derived from the laws of God."

Speaking to thousands assembled at his summer residence
for his Sunday blessing, he said
he had received messages of gratitude and support from all classes of people in all parts of the world, more than he had ever received for a papal document. He thanked all those accepting his decision.

The speech added to an impression that the 70-year-old pontiff was increasingly worried about the explosion of attack
and criticism against the encyclical.

Vatican sources noted that the Pope's defense of the document
had no precedent in church history. They said no Pope had ever felt obliged repeatedly to explain and justify in public a decision of such magnitude.

While the encyclical was not issued as infallible word, it is binding on the world's half billion Roman Catholics. Thus opposition to it has caused a crisis
of papal authority.

In an apparent effort to soften
the opposition, Pope Paul indicated that the encyclical, issued July 28 after years of study and preparation, does not forever
preclude possible changes.

Nixon top selection at outset

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.
(AP) — Richard M. Nixon's corps of Republican convention delegates gained recruits Sunday, and a party patriarch said the former vice president has "probably buttoned up" the GOP nomination for the White House.

New York Gov. Nelson A.
Rockefeller, striving to block a first ballot Nixon nomination,
insisted "it's not locked up."

Nixon was still 107 votes short of a nominating majority in an Associated Press count of solid,
first-ballot support.

But as delegations caucused
in the ornate, beachfront hotels
along Collins Avenue, his tally
moved closer to the 657 target.
Rockefeller gained new support, too, but his standing was a distant second. And he has never claimed a shot at early ballot
nomination, basing his strategy
instead on the contention that Nixon will falter in a succession of roll calls next Wednesday night.

A third contender, California
Gov. Ronald Reagan, was making the rounds of Southern and Western delegate meetings—although he still cloaks his candidacy behind a favorite son banner.

It was Sen. Everett M. Dirksen
of Illinois who said Nixon
probably had clinched nomination. Dirksen said Nixon "is so close to striking distance of the nomination that I don't believe
he could be stopped."

Nixon gained 16 votes in the convention eve caucuses, pushing its total count to 560 first ballot votes. Rockefeller picked up 15, climbing to a total of 223.

And Reagan had 158 backers,
including his 86-vote California delegation.

That left 161 delegates uncommitted, 231 pledged to favorite son candidates. And Nixon men were prospecting diligently
among those delegates.

The Nixon forces have claimed all along that over 700
delegates stand ready to vote
for their man on the first convention ballot.

Nixon gained votes in Idaho,
Florida, Delaware, Texas, Colorado, and Utah.

Rockefeller's gains came largely in Rhode Island, where 13 delegates joined his ranks.

Republican draftsmen agree
on a 1968 platform committed to Vietnam peace talks and "de-Americanization" of the war—
even as the candidates and their political lieutenants wage a political combat over a nominee to run it.

Rockefeller said the Nixon
forces are trying to create that impression that the convention
is locked up to build a bandwagon
on psychology.

"I think he's got to maintain the position that he has it locked up," Rockefeller's aid of his absent rival. "Otherwise there would be a very rapid deterioration, which I think will occur on the second and third ballots."

Rockefeller asserted that Nixon
has been courting convention
delegates by saying he would accept Reagan as a vice presidential running mate.

Family of five suffer injuries in plane crash

HONESDALE — A family of five from Beach Lake was admitted to the Wayne County
Memorial Hospital, Honesdale,
Sunday, after their plane
crashed one-half mile from the Cherry Ridge Airport, five miles south of Honesdale.

Robert Laarmann, 32, of Beach Lake R.D. 1, and his wife Wilma, 25, are reported in guarded condition in the hospital. Their children, Sheryllee, seven; Rhonda Lynn,
six; and Robert, three and one-
half are in fair condition.
The crash occurred about 5:35
p.m. according to State Police
from the Wyoming Barracks.
The special aircraft investigator from the barracks was still investigating the mishap late Sunday night.

Keystone delegates far away

By ROBERT S. VAN FLEET
Record Convention Bureau
MIAMI BEACH — North of Miami Beach, past a three-mile "strip" of night clubs and clip joints in the town of Hollywood, rises the Diplomat Hotel, which Pennsylvania delegates to the Republican National Convention will call home for the next week.

The Diplomat, a pretentious, garrish hotel, was chosen primarily because of its ability, to house under one roof the 1,100 member contingent arriving here from Pennsylvania for the convention.

(See Page Four)

"The alternative was to be in two hotels, and that we didn't want to do," explained a delegation spokesman.

The huge hotel has the usual Miami-style palm-shaded swimming pool in front and a seascape in back. But it is at least a 45-minute ride to Convention Hall, which has some delegates grumbling already.

Organizers for the delegation have arranged to have five busses—including one for the press—continually on hand to shuttle delegates to the hall.

But the far-out location has given the Pennsylvania delegation the distinction of being the most distant from the scene of action.

The delegation will be wined and dined throughout the week by presidential hopefuls, Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, and Florida Gov. Claude R. Kirk, Jr. Delegates and their wives are invited to visit the University of Miami Art Museum and to tour the fashionable homes of Coral Gables.

They are also being advised in a memo from Sally Stauffer, State National Committee woman, that security measures are extremely tight at Convention Hall. A delegate, name who wants to leave the floor will have to have his hand stamped and show his ticket as he leaves and enters the hall.

Final advice to delegates in a memo:

"For a good public image on TV, tickets must be used and no seats are to be left unoccupied."

11 in hospital after violent York outbreak

YORK, Pa. (AP)—A gunbattle in a predominately Negro section of this south-central Pennsylvania city early Sunday left 11 persons in hospitals with gunshot wounds.

The violence ended at dawn and an uneasy calm settled over the district about seven blocks from City Hall.

No arrests were made and the disorder was confined to a one-block area. There was no looting.

The disturbance—the third in recent months in this city of a shotgun from his second-floor apartment window, police said. Chester Roach, 58, who is white, told police he began shooting after someone threw a brick and later fired a shot through his apartment window. The gunbattle ensued between Roach and several persons on the street before police arrived.

Police said the gunfire subsided after some 60 policemen moved in to seal off the area to pedestrian and vehicle traffic.

Ten of the 11 persons shot were given hospital treatment and released. Earl Smith, 18, was listed in serious condition at York Hospital with a .38 caliber gunshot wound in the lower back.

Damage in the area was confined to two small building fires, a car overturned and burned, some broken windows and several police cruisers hit by bricks, police reported.

One of the fires was in a meat store underneath Roach's apartment. The owner, E. A. Hoffman, said no merchandise was taken from the store although the store's two large glass windows were broken. Earlier reports were that the violence began after someone tried to burglarize the store.

Hoffman said he rented the second-floor apartment to Roach about a year ago.

This one-time capital of the United States during the Revolutionary Era was the scene of disorders for five consecutive nights in mid-July. Violence also occurred after the assassination of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Dirksen feels Nixon close to nomination goal

MIAMI BEACH (AP)—Sen. Everett M. Dirksen declared Sunday that Richard M. Nixon "is so close to striking distance of the nomination that offhand I don't believe he could be stopped."

Dirksen again refused to say who he wants to see the party's national convention nominate for president because "I still have to go before that convention and present that platform and ask them to give their stamp of approval."

As chairman of the Platform Committee, the Illinois senator and Senate minority leader, directed shaping of the campaign document.

He said if Nixon is not nominated on the first ballot, that California Gov. Ronald Reagan could gain strength in subsequent voting.

But he said: "Offhand, I'd have to say it's probably buttoned up" for Nixon. Dirksen gave his views on ABC's TV-radio program "Issues and Answers."

Gov. Shafer not hiding from V.P.

(Record Convention Bureau)
MIAMI BEACH — Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania doesn't think the vice presidential lightning is going to strike him, but he doesn't plan to move out of the way if it begins to move in his direction.

Shafer told newsmen at the Diplomat Hotel here that he is not seeking the nomination but that he would give it "serious consideration," no matter which of the major candidates called—if they called.

Shafer, who commutes from the Pennsylvania hotel by helicopter to downtown activity points, said he would be "less than candid" if he were to say he wouldn't consider the vice presidency.

"Of course I would consider it."

Rev. Dennis holds fast service

BANGOR — Three communion services marked the 90th anniversary of Trinity Lutheran Church, Bangor, on Sunday. The Rev. William E. Dennis, pastor, took the occasion to preach his final sermons at the church.

The congregation was organized in 1873 by the Rev. B.F. Apple, who became its first pastor. During the church's 90 years, it has had only five pastors.

The Rev. William E. Dennis has been the pastor since 1955. During his pastorate a new parsonage was purchased, an educational building was constructed and renovations were made in the church.

Also during his administration, the main church was repainted, new tower chimes were installed and new choir vestments were purchased.

The first pastor was the Rev. B. F. Apple from 1873 to 1895. Under his administration the congregation was organized and the main portion of the present church was built.

Apple was succeeded by the Rev. E. A. Yehl, D. D., from 1895 to 1916. Under his pastorate, the church was enlarged and the first pipe organ purchased.

'Jubilee 68' set tonight at N'fld

NEWFOUNDLAND — "Jubilee 68," a one-of-a-kind, one-night-only musical revue will be presented at 8:30 p.m. tonight at the Arts Center in Newfoundland.

Miss Jennie Baumann of Henryville, who previously did the musical arrangements for Bill Marley's "Make Yourself at Home," is co-directing this third in a series of special Monday night presentations.

The other two special Monday evening productions by the Court Players were a presentation of Harold Pinter's "The Collection," and a showing of underground films from New York.

LaAnna Youth Hostel

Pike hostel helps ghetto youngsters

LAANNA — Programs designed to help "ghetto kids" take a step in the right direction are, like the weather, something everybody talks about, but nobody does anything about.

But not Phineas Anderson, a tall, thin, bearded, intense young man who directs the Outdoor Program of the Pennsylvania Advancement School now "in residence" at the American Youth Hostel at LaAnna, Pike County.

Phin Anderson is helping ghetto kids-Negroes and whites-to feel a sense of accomplishment that "helps to correct a characteristic of

under-achievement: distorted self-image."

"Knowledge of self," and an accompanying satisfaction in achievement which leads a youngster to higher aims and a happier life is the real reason for being for the PAC Outdoor Program now under way at the Hostel.

Two dozen youths Twenty-four boys the ages of ten to 14, who come from the slums of Philadelphia, are transported each week from a dirty, littered street to the Youth Hostel. They come to know the countryside as few adult residents know it, during the week-long activities, observations, and study included in the Outdoor Program.

They are up each morning at 6:30 a.m. Rain or shine, cold or hot, they plunge into the freezing waters of the Seventeen Mile Run as it tumbles toward the Wallenpaupack, for a swim.

Phin Anderson is the first one in each morning, because he enjoys it. But he tries to make it appear that there is nothing he likes better when the temperature hovers around 40 degrees than a refreshing dip in a stream noted for trout fishing, because trout flourish in icy-cold water.

Each of the boys is at the Youth Hostel because he is an "under-achiever." But there's nothing in individual or group activities when the boys are diving into the creek or filling up on a hearty breakfast to indicate that there is anything in this under-achiever business.

The six days are filled with activity, and each boy gradually begins to not only achieve individually but to achieve through teamwork. There is the ropes course, an aerial maze of ropes tied at varying heights between trees, with seven sections each boy must pass through, each different in difficulty and in structure.

Strenuous activity The Wall and Beam challenges require strong group cohesion and skill in order to achieve success. The object is to get a team of six boys over a wooden wall eleven feet high and then to surmount a beam placed between two trees nine feet from the ground.

A series of initiative tests pose predicaments which demand group cooperation. For example, six boys are given a ten foot pole and then asked to get every group member over a rope stretched between two trees at a height of five feet, six inches. They are in a simulated prisoner of war camp and the rope is an "electrical fence" so that they cannot touch it.

One of the most frightening activities is rock climbing, and the Pocono Mountains lend themselves to this test, supplying sheer 16-foot rock faces for the boys to climb and then to rappel down.

But the climax of the whole week's activities is the "one-day solo." Each boy-even the ten-year-olds-only four days away from the crowded city ghetto, spend a day and a night alone in the middle of the woods, with minimal equipment, in a test for wilderness skills.

"This is not only a test for courage," Phin points out. "But it is also a test against loneliness. It is far more of a contest with self than a contest with Nature. Loneliness and fear are the two things the boys combat on their solos."

"When a boy, particularly a city boy, is doing the commando crawl on a rope suspended 15 feet in the air, or is all by himself in the wilds, he is being challenged in a way that he has probably never been challenged before. And in the process of that challenge, the boy discovers a courage, a staying power, a resilience, a self-reliance, a personal strength he never knew he had," says Phin. "And with these comes a greater knowing of self."

Nature studies The Outdoor Program includes not only wilderness skills in which the boys learn to identify edible plants, how to build a fire and cook food found in the woods, how to lash and build a shelter from natural surroundings, how to bridge a fast-moving stream and how to read a map and compass; they study Nature, too.

The Indians being the most true representation of "men of the forest," the boys learn the Indian crafts, leather, copper, wood and clay work.

Physical Habits Derange Spine

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, D.C. It is proven that many habits in life cause derangement of the spine. Parents should watch the posture of children. Any tendency to stooped shoulders, hip sway, or slouchiness, should be corrected. Boys who carry papers are apt to have one shoulder higher. Girls with a baby to tend are apt to support the child with one hip. Disturbances of the spinal alignment in the region between the shoulders may cause chronic stomach, lung or heart trouble, and disturbances of the pelvis may cause sciatica, constipation, painful menstruation, etc. The spine is an important organ and often proved to be the cause of almost any kind of sickness or disease, in places remote from the back. (One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the scientific practice of Chiropractic, written by Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, D.C., Brodheadville, Pa., Phone: 992-4787.)

World ready for solution

It has not always been easy to be sympathetic to the enthusiasts who have promoted the campaign to "Save Sunfish Pond".

They seemed to wear blinkers and ear muffs. They could only see what they wanted to see and hear what they themselves had said.

They have been so sure they were right that anyone who thought there was a way to even discuss the matter had to be wrong. Those who tried to argue were the enemy.

Still, they have had a good position from the start. Any group of private citizens who takes on the "giants" of industry (especially public utilities and or an official arm of government) has a cause assured of public support. And this small group has played its hand well over months that stretched into years.

It is obvious that the conservationists have at least won a battle. In recent weeks governors, public agencies and even the New Jersey utility companies have agreed that Sunfish Pond has been saved. But they haven't given up on the hope of salvaging some power source from the Tocks Dam, specifically from a pumped storage reservoir that might be located some 300 yards from the preserved pond.

Typically, the conservationists haven't given up either. Their all-or-nothing-at-all is being stretched to include environs of the pond.

How close is a potential nuisance before it is a bonafide bother? As with the case for more and cheaper power vs. the case for preserving what is worthwhile, the question really isn't black or white. A compromise has been offered that should benefit the general public whether it wants to hike into the Kittatinny Mountains or have adequate sources of electricity, water and even sewage disposal.

Yes, there are other ways to acquire power just as there are other places to hike and commune with nature. The world is ready for a solution to the controversy of Sunfish Pond.

Begin work now

The Mid-Atlantic Music and Arts Center completed the public concert division of its summer program on Sunday night and with it culminated its immediate touch with residents of Monroe County for the most part.

However, the feeling between the public and the music and arts group, that took over Onawa Lodge this summer for the first time, was first rate. There appears to be a genuine feeling that each would like the association to resume next summer.

However, the resumption of this growing friendship may not be as simple as one might suppose. Actually, it could be quite difficult unless work toward this end is accelerated immediately.

The Mid-Atlantic Music and Arts Center had a truly successful year as far as students and friendships are concerned, but it is a well known fact that the organization has had financial troubles. This is the trouble that could prove to be a grave problem if not alleviated during the fall and winter months.

It has taken a great deal of money to move the organization to Mountainhome from New York, renovate Onawa Lodge and purchase the property. Funds pledged for these purposes haven't been nearly enough.

It will take a great deal more money to see the organization through another year or two, before it becomes self-sustaining.

This organization is a real booster for the Pocono Mountains. It brings many great names from the music world to our area and it draws tourists with an interest in music from various sections of the United States and Canada.

We all owe it to the area to do all in our power to retain the Mid-Atlantic Music and Arts Center in this region and work toward this end should begin immediately.

Conventions do job

MIAMI BEACH — It is irresistible for some to ridicule the presidential nominating conventions.

It is easy to — and false. Most of the epithets and satire are superficial. Of course there is hoopla and corn and silly and meaningless motion. But these are the trivial trappings of an institution which was never designed for television.

But the presidential nominating convention should be judged by its results. On that basis it has proved efficient, effective, and responsive to voter opinion.

If you look at the way the convention does its job, you'll shudder and groan and fear for the nation. If you look at what the convention has done over the last 40 years, you must acknowledge a superior achievement and wonder how it could possibly happen.

But it does with remarkable consistency.

Three functions The conventions can be fairly judged by how well they do three things:

They should nominate candidates qualified for the job.

They should reflect with substantial faithfulness the desires of the voters in each party.

They must write a platform which discloses the main direction the party wants to go.

We ought to look more closely at the record before concluding that this much abused system is a kind of political appendix which ought to be removed from the body politic.

The truth is that over the past four decades the conventions of both parties have, with very rare exception, chosen nominees of superior ability and character.

Out of the Republican conventions came Herbert Hoover, Alf Landon, Wendell Willkie, Thomas Dewey, Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon, and Barry Goldwater.

The Democratic conventions produced Al Smith, Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Adlai Stevenson, John F. Kennedy, and Lyndon Johnson.

That's not bad; it's good. I doubt if any other process of selection would do better.

Had these nominations reflected voter opinion within the parties which made them? They had — from Hoover to Willkie to Goldwater, from FDR to JFK to Johnson.

Not in a single instance of any of these 13 presidential nominees did the convention choice do violence to the popular will within the party. The accusation is loosely made that the convention is the tool of the party bosses, for the record shows that the party bosses have been the instrument of popular opinion, not its burial.

As to party platforms, they have never been much, but I can't see that any other way of writing them would make them better. We ought to keep trying.

Madhouse starts today

Record Washington Bureau

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. — "There is something about a national convention," wrote H. L. Mencken, "that makes it as fascinating as a revival or a hanging. It is vulgar, it is ugly, it is stupid, it is tedious . . . and yet it is somehow charming. One sits through long sessions wishing heartily that all the delegates and alternates were dead and in hell — and then suddenly there comes a show so gaudy and hilarious, so melodramatic and obscene, so unimaginably exhilarating and preposterous that one lives a gorgeous year in an hour."

Any reporter who has ever attended a national political convention will have little difficulty agreeing with Mencken. And most Americans, who now are able to share in the exhilarating, preposterous and gorgeous hours via television, can also appreciate his description of the quadrennial circus which opens today.

Some 60,000 persons are said to be invading Miami Beach for the Republican conclave. Many of them will be writers, reporters and technicians for newspapers, magazines and the broadcasting

There is, of course, a way other than the national convention by which the parties could decide their presidential nominees. That is by a national party primary, with a run-off if no contender got a majority of the total vote.

It would be costly, time-consuming, and exhausting for the candidates and the voters. It would mean the equivalent of two presidential elections and possibly three in the span of three months.

It would be so expensive that the Federal government would have to pay the cost unless only the very wealthy are to run.

We may come to such a system, but we should not embark on it lightly, particularly since the national convention system has manifestly worked well.

Conceivably we could combine the two: make the national primary advisory only and retain the convention for the final decision.

Don MacLean

'Rocky' makes error

WASHINGTON — I have a professorial friend who spends the better part of each day picking nits. In fact, I should say he has the biggest collection of nits this side of the Great Divide. Recently, he discovered such a beautiful specimen that he could scarcely contain himself while telling me about it.

He first thumped on my desk a copy of "Unity, Freedom and Peace—A Blueprint for Tomorrow," written by Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York. A copy of this book somehow has been mysteriously delivered to every delegate at the GOP convention. My friend instructed me to read the first page of the opening chapter. It says this:

"One of my heroes is Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th president of the United States. What a man he was — and what a fabulous, zestful life he led! An asthmatic, puny child, he stole his great strength and his spirit and won lightweight boxing contests and election to Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard University."

"He was a cattle rancher in North Dakota, a police commissioner and social reformer in New York City. In the Spanish-American War he led the legendary Rough Riders in their famous charge up San Juan Hill outside Santiago in Cuba."

The professor then triumphantly opened another book under my nose. This was a copy of something called, "The Correspondents' War," by Charles H. Brown, Library of Congress

Delegates at convention

Mrs. Benner 'professional' among area GOP delegates

(Editor's Note — This is the first in a series of four articles on delegates and alternate delegates representing Monroe County and the 15th District at the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach.)

STROUDSBURG — The "Professional" among delegates from the 15th district to the Republican National convention this year is Mrs. Barbara Benner of Allentown.

After serving 18 years as a precinct committeewoman, the 43-year-old housewife has risen through party ranks to her present position of vice-chairman of the campaign committee of the National Federation of Republican Women and a member of the Federation's board of directors.

She is also the immediate past president of the Pennsylvania Council of Republican Women and still a member of its board of directors.

After being an alternate delegate to the 1960 and 1964 conventions, Mrs. Benner this year was elected a full delegate.

Rules committee Moreover, she will be

Mrs. Barbara Benner

representing the state on the rules committee along with former Gov. William Scranton.

The principal task of the rules committee is to establish the procedures for the election of delegates and the running of the next convention.

Like the other delegates and alternates from the 15th District, Mrs. Benner declares herself to be uncommitted and says she presently has no leaning toward either Richard Nixon or Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

Although somewhat reluctant to express her views on major platform issues, she believes that crime and law and order in America should be given top priority by the convention.

On the issue of the Vietnam war, she feels it is difficult to take a position because all the facts simply are not available.

Mrs. Benner says she is, like everyone else, interested in peace and an end to the war. But she added quickly that she does not favor "peace at any price."

Rockefeller's peace plan for Vietnam, she said, is a "very good starting point" but added that in some ways it was "lon simple."

Still, she praised Rockefeller for putting a plan into words and predicted Nixon, too, would speak out, after the convention.

"The pressure of American public opinion will make him speak out," she said.

Mrs. Benner said that as vice-chairman of the campaign committee she expected to be traveling a good deal after the conventions are over.

She went to the convention in Miami with the rest of the Pennsylvania delegation by chartered plane last weekend.

Jim Bishop

1923—year to remember

Two events of no consequence occurred 45 years ago. An Austrian named Adolph Hitler walked into the Buegerbrau Keller in Munich with General Erich von Ludendorff and announced that he was the new Chancellor of Germany.

In Rome, Premier Benito Mussolini said that his fascist party would "pass over the more or less decomposed body of the goddess of liberty."

The world wasn't listening. In the United States, in 1923, everybody was singing "Yes, We Have No Bananas"; President Warren G. Harding had coined a word, "Normalcy"; Dempsey flattened Firpo; Dr. Serge Voronoff was rejuvenating old men with transplanted

monkey glands; legislators said that birth control was "artificial, unnatural and pornographic."

Hitler said that his Bavarian fascist party had voted to intern "all Jews." The Jewish people would report voluntarily for imprisonment or "they will be hunted down and shot." He spoke plainly, as did Mussolini, but their countrymen were deaf.

In Rome, Mussolini had completed a year as premier and was due to fall, because he had but 50 votes in a parliamentary structure of 430. In Germany, Hitler was known solely as an aide to General von Ludendorff, who vowed to restore the Hohenzollern monarchy. He was arrested by Gen. von Lossow a short time later and sent to Landsberg Prison.

Adolf Hitler had 10,000 followers who instituted military maneuvers in the villages of Starnberg and Oberweisfeld. They wore sweaters, World War I tunics, and carried brass knuckles and revolvers. Before he went to jail, Hitler shouted that Germany was a "Marxist-Jewish-International pigsty!" The German press made jokes about him and his "army."

Desperate bid

In Rome, Mussolini made a desperate bid for Catholic support by ordering religious training restored to Italian public schools. In Gerarchia, he wrote: "The truth is evident to all who are unblinded by dogmatism that men nowadays are tired of liberty. Liberty is no longer a chaste, severe maiden for whom generations fought and died. For the intrepid, restless youths — Order, Hierarchy, Discipline, Fascism is not afraid to declare itself anti-liberal."

In July 1923, he won the support of the Church. As a result, the deputies gave him a vote of confidence: 335 to 139. "What is liberty?" the short, jut-jawed dictator shouted. "There is no such thing as absolute liberty." The deputies were so proud to lose theirs that they carried Mussolini through the chamber on their shoulders.

Ideological infancy

It was a time of ideological infancy. The young Soviet Union announced that 13,000,000 of its people were starving. "Extremely unfortunate," the official dispatch stated. "We have not enough farm implements or livestock to till the grain fields." Two weeks later, the Russian government sold 1,400,000 bushels of wheat to the German government.

He became the master of Italy. "Whoever does not vote is ill," he said. "Whoever is ill needs castor oil." Italians, from Milano to Pachino, began to vote. On a pretext, Mussolini seized the Greek island of Corfu. The people cheered. Wall Street said that Mussolini did not intend to go to war because he had not asked for a loan.

Catalogue No. F 717. B7. The professor instructed me to read once again, I did:

"The one thing everyone seems to know about the battle of Santiago is that Teddy Roosevelt led the charge up San Juan Hill with his Rough Riders. Unfortunately, it does not happen to be true."

"The fact is that the Rough Riders with other troops attacked and gained Kettle Hill, in advance of San Juan Hill, and to its right. In his story of the Rough Riders, Roosevelt wrote that from Kettle Hill 'We had a splendid view of the charge of the San Juan blockhouse to our left, where the infantry of Kent, led by Hawkins, were climbing the hill.'"

"The Rough Riders assisted the advance of the regulars up San Juan by firing at the Spaniards from Kettle Hill. When Roosevelt ascended San Juan Hill with his troops, the Spaniards had already fled."

The professor seems to think that if Rockefeller can make a mistake such as this in his book, he shouldn't be president. But I don't think it's all that serious. For one thing, I doubt if Rockefeller even wrote his own book.

Trouble in Czechoslovakia. Oh, my. Where is Neville Chamberlain now that we need him?

Sen. McCarthy was quoted as saying communism is a myth. You know, when he retires, I won't myth him.

6,000 members of press to cover GOP Convention

industry. It takes thousands of bodies, tons of communications equipment and tremendous stamina to cover a political convention.

News media

This year, news media personnel outnumber official delegates and alternates at the conventions, both here and in Chicago later this month. More than twice as many people are engaged in reporting the news of this Miami Beach convention as in making it. The national political committees say that almost 6,000 press, radio and television representatives have been accredited.

Just as in the case of congress, the story isn't acted out on the convention floor as much as it is in hotel rooms, caucuses and quick huddles in a corridor. It takes initiative, legwork and legerdemain to dig out the real news. Much of what happens in Convention Hall — at least until the presidential balloting starts — is prearranged and prefabricated.

In Miami Beach, there are 1,108 seats at Convention Hall for daily newspaper reporters representing 650 papers or news agencies. The ticklish job of allocating these seats and accrediting reporters has been handled for the past 50 years by the Standing Committee of Correspondents in the Congressional Press Galleries.

The committee consists of five Washington correspondents who are elected by their colleagues who cover congress. This includes some 850 men and women — just about every newspaper reporter in the Nation's Capital.

Rarely satisfied

The daily press reporters are rarely satisfied with their assigned seats or their working space at the hotels and convention halls. And while we appreciate the role of electronic journalism, particularly at the big conventions, we really resent all the trappings — the walkie-talkies, the miles of wires and the technicians who don't seem to belong to the business of gathering a story. We think they are allotted a disproportionate share of the space.

The broadcasting networks and stations will have a total force of between 3,600 and 4,000 at each convention, counting all the commentators, reporters, researchers, engineers, cameramen, producers and directors. British Broadcasting Corp. will provide pooled coverage, via satellite, for television stations in 32 nations. Reporters from more than 30 countries have been assigned seats.

To accommodate all of us, Western Union alone has provided one of the largest communications installations it has ever put together for a major news event. Western Union said it handled 5,074,844 words at the 1964 Republican Convention. This does not include the wire services or the large news bureaus who have their own office and teletype equipment.

No one has ever attempted to calculate the number of spoken words and it is probably just as well that they don't. But, for the next few days, at least, the American people will listen . . . and read . . . and shake their heads in awe of a convention process which has no legal standing but which they would probably not abandon easily, even though they have a relatively small voice in the selection of the nominees.

And preposterous though it may be, we'll be there, too, as long as the people put up with it.

Ann Landers

No more breaks, please

Dear Ann Landers: Several days ago I awakened at about 2 a.m. with a headache. I went to the bathroom to get an aspirin, and fell. I was sure I had broken my shoulder. My husband telephoned his young cousin who has just started to practice medicine. He came right over and said he didn't think it was a fracture but advised me to get X-rays taken and there was no fracture. This morning I received a bill for the X-rays ($35) and a bill from my husband's cousin for $15. I don't mind the bill for the X-rays but I do feel this young doctor has a nerve charging me $15 for a sleeping pill. Had we known he was going to charge we would have called our regular family doctor. We just wanted to give the lad a break and help him get some practical experience. Were we wrong?

TENNESSEE

Dear Tenn: Just what kind of a break is it for a doctor (young or old) to make a house call at 2 a.m. for nix? Doctors get plenty of practical experience taking care of fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, nieces, nephews, and grandparents for free—not to mention charity cases and clinic patients. Internship also offers a world of free experience, particularly the odd-hour variety.

Pay the bill and do your cousin a favor by not giving him any more breaks in the middle of the night.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a widow who has been keeping steady company with a fine man. His children are grown and married and they seem to be intelligent, fine people. The man is nice looking and a neat dresser. He would be a lot better looking, however, if he did something about his teeth that are missing.

Ann, I can't understand how a person can ignore three large holes right in the front of his mouth. It seems to me that one of his children would say something to him. Since they seem not to notice, should I mention it? Or should I concentrate on his good qualities and not risk offending him?

A.D.

Dear A. D.: Speak up. There's more involved here than looks. This man needs dental attention and if you can prod him toward it, you will be doing him an enormous favor. The reason time he comes over with another lovely gift I feel like a bigger heel.

Please tell me what to do. My conscience is bothering me.

I HEAR NO BELLS

Dear No Bells: To string along a guy who is serious when you are not—is duplicity of the worst kind. The longer you keep it up the guiltier you'll feel and the more severe will be his disappointment. Tell Rudy you must stop seeing him—and why. There's an outside chance that Rudy will look better to you in a year or two, and if he does you might reconsider—if he's still available, that is.

Alcohol is no shortcut to social success. If you think you have to drink to be accepted by your friends, get the facts. Read "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

The bidding:

South West North East
Pass Pass 1♥ Pass

Opening lead—king of hearts. It may not be altogether right to show hands from world championship play where the participants fail to achieve their best possible result, but the fact is that such hands are generally more interesting and instructive than most.

For example, consider this deal from the match between Brazil and the United States during the World Bridge Olympiad in 1964. When the North American pair held the North-South cards, the bidding went as shown. North quite reasonably decided there was very little chance of a game after his partner had passed originally, and he therefore gave up the ghost when South responded to one heart with two clubs.

The Brazilian West led the king of hearts against two clubs. Declarer won in dummy with the ace and returned a heart. West took the nine with the jack and shifted to the queen of diamonds, which South ruffed.

Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, ruffed a heart, and when the suit turned out to be divided 3-3, he made the rest of the tricks by discarding two spades on dummy's hearts.

Bidding two clubs and making six on a hand where five clubs is surely a good contract was a depressing result for the American North-South pair. They had good reason to think they would lose points on the deal, but, strangely enough, they gained 270 points when the Brazilian North-South pair at the second table bid as follows:

East led the king of diamonds, continued with a diamond to the jack, and the outcome was that the U.S. East-West pair cashed five diamonds to defeat three notrump one trick. So the Brazilian pair lost not only the vulnerable game, but the part score as well.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

The latest thing in industrial relations and even in community relations seeking to restore some sort of rapport between ghetto residents and law enforcement bodies is "sensitivity training".

In strife torn cities, for instance, the police and ghetto militants are brought together and through various group dynamics learn something of each other's problems and attitudes, to understand if not like each other.

Role-playing is one of those techniques: a Negro is asked to play the role of a policeman arresting a violator while the real policeman is playing the role of a Negro driver.

Well, the Stroudsburgs have been way ahead in Group Dynamics. I can remember at least 15 years ago when the local PTA's were using role-playing, problem "plays" to spark discussions, and buzz sessions to reach a consensus.

Church leadership training sessions, AAUW programs, all have made use of these techniques for many years. The theory behind them all is that passive listening or reading about a problem may increase one's knowledge but not one's participation.

Arguments are more apt to harden an opinion than to change it. And the only meaningful action results from convictions we've convinced ourselves of. The whole problem of course is that each of us feel that it's the other guy who needs some "sensitivity training".

Kellersville church setting for wedding

STROUDSBURG — The Kellersville Methodist Church was the setting for the Aug. 3 wedding of Miss Diana Lacktis to Dennis Smolak at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Ross Leader and the late Edward Lacktis of Stroudsburg R.D. 2. The bridegroom is the son of Louis Smolak of Delaware Water Gap.

Rev. David Frame performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with white gladiolas and white pompons. Bouquets of daisies and pink asters decorated the ends of the pews. Mrs. Nina Whitmore of Stroudsburg, was organist.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Walter G. Fielding. She wore a sleeveless organza cage dress trimmed with rows of daisy lace. The lace trim was repeated on her circular train. A band of Venice lace flowers held her fingertip veil. She carried a bouquet of white daisies, white carnations and pink sweetheart roses.

Joan Lacktis of Stroudsburg R.D. 2, was maid of honor. She wore an A-line gown of pink linen trimmed with a single row of lace down the front and a pink Dior bow in her hair.

The bridesmaids, Mrs. William Carlton of East Stroudsburg and Miss Darlene Ott of Delaware Water Gap, also wore gowns of pink linen in the same style. They all carried colonial bouquets of white daisies and light pink asters. The maid of honor's was tied with white ribbon and the bridesmaids' with pink ribbon.

Douglas Nichols of Philadelphia, was best man. Ushers were William Carlton of East Stroudsburg and Charles Harger of Delaware Water Gap.

A reception for 100 guests was held at Ye Old Saylor's Inn, Saylorburg. The bride's table had a centerpiece of white gladiolas and white asters. The guest tables had centerpieces of pink asters, white pompons and pink candles.

After a tour of the Western states they will make their home in Delaware Water Gap.

The bride was graduated from Stroudsburg High School in 1964 and is employed as a bookkeeper at Hemlock Farms. Mr. Smolak is also an alumnus of Stroudsburg High School and is employed at Patterson-Kelley Co.

Irish mothers in key role in nipping the hayseeds

By DONAL O'HIGGINS
DUBLIN (UPI) — How're you going to keep them down on the farm — after this word from mom.

Mrs. Ethna Viney, a prominent writer and sociologist, explains what is happening. She says the women of Ireland have propagated the idea that rural life is second class and have resolved to send their children to the cities.

Mrs. Viney told a recent Social Congress that, "The farmers' wives are starved for affection and love. And their daily work is sheer drudgery."

The average farmer's wife only gets out once a week — to go to church on Sunday, one sociologist told the congress. "And on Sundays," she added, "wives don't walk with their husbands lest someone might think they were fond of each other."

And an old Irish custom is disappearing — that of matchmaking.

Because women are painting a brighter picture of opportunities for their offspring in the cities, many farms in the Irish Republic are faced with a serious and growing manpower shortage.

At the moment, only 500 youths are studying agriculture in a land which boasts 200,000 farms. And of these 500, reports one sociologist, only 25 per cent will return to their own farms.

In the cities, already crowded and with acute housing shortages, the farmers' sons and daughters hope to break new ground far from the manual farmyard tasks.

But for many of them their arrival is only the first step in a journey that will end in Liverpool, Birmingham or some other British city.

Successful Irish Governments have been concerned at the steady drift toward the bright lights.

Although it now has been accepted as a harsh economic fact, the government still pumps money and specialized skills into depressed areas in an effort to halt the population shifts.

Farming organizations and local parish committees also have embarked on a campaign to bring some of the city amenities to rural areas.

Dance halls playing host to pop bands have sprung up in many areas. There has been a quickening of interest in traditional Irish sports. And there has been concentrated effort to educate the younger generation into a realization of the potential of farming.

But behind the problem stands the rural wife with her accepted role of hard work and self-effacement and a determination to save her children from a similar existence.

East Stroudsburg mayor hopeful of obtaining former post office

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg Mayor Thomas Kistler Sunday said he is "very optimistic that something can be worked out for the benefit of the community" in obtaining the old post office at Crystal and Analomink streets.

The borough wants to acquire the 35-year-old post office building for use as a new borough building.

Citing "the location is ideal for our municipal building," Kistler explained that the General Services Administration, charged with the liquidation of the old structure, said the borough would get first consideration in its bid to acquire the property.

Property appraisal

Kistler said the General Services Administration will make an appraisal of the property in the very near future. Borough officials will be notified after the appraisal so that a satisfactory agreement may be reached.

The United States Post Office Department in previous years used to sell old postal structures at a token fee of one dollar, it was reported, but that this practice ceased some years ago.

Kistler said that when borough officials met with GSA representatives in Washington, D.C., recently, local officials had been given the impression that the building would be disposed of with very liberal terms.

The mayor indicated the borough may be able to purchase the property with a 10 to 20 per cent down payment along with a long term mortgage loan at about five and three quarter per cent interest.

"In a case like this," Kistler said, "we might be able to buy it without a bond issue."

No other agencies are apparently interested in acquiring the structure, Kistler said.

As a normal practice, the GSA contacts federal agencies in the area to determine if they could use the structure. If no federal agencies are interested, the same procedure is followed for state agencies, then the county government and finally, the borough government.

Kistler agreed that the GSA has given East Stroudsburg a priority by not following the usual procedure in the liquidation.

Reiterating that the old post office is ideal for the community, Kistler cited the enlarged facilities in the post office building which the borough could utilize.

The structure consists of three floors and a basement.

Fern Ridge probes four accidents

FERN RIDGE — State Police from Fern Ridge were kept busy this weekend, as four accidents, three of which involved injuries, were investigated.

A three-year-old Saylorsburg girl, Jemma Rita Castello, was treated and released from the General Hospital of Monroe County after an accident two miles south of Effort on Legislative Route 45042 in Chestnut Hill Township Saturday at 6 p.m.

According to police, Granville H. Frable, 41, of Effort was pulling out of a construction site, attempting to head south on the legislative route, when Julia A. Castello, 32, of Saylorsburg R.D. 1, also going south, rounded a curve in the highway and struck the left side of Frable's truck.

There were no other injuries in the crash. Police estimated $100 damage to the Castello vehicle and none to the truck.

Carmen Cinicola, 30, of 77 Broadway St., Jim Thorpe, is in fair condition in Gnadent-Huetten Memorial Hospital, Lehigh, suffering a scalp laceration, following a one-vehicle accident Sunday at 12:40 a.m. on Rt. 903, Kitter Township, Carbon County, about two miles west of Lake Harmony.

Cinicola was a passenger in a car operated by Thomas Franklin Mimm, 28, of 601 South Ave., Jim Thorpe. According to police, Mimm ran off the roadway and hit the guardrail after entering a slight curve traveling west on Rt. 903.

Police estimate $200 to Mimm's vehicle.

There were no injuries in a tractor-trailer accident Sunday at 2:10 a.m. on Rt. 80, east of Blakeslee. Police said Herman Floyd Guisewite, 33, of Lewisburg R.D. 3, was traveling east when he swerved to avoid a deer which ran in front of his truck, ran off the right side of the road, and down a slight embankment.

Police directed traffic for two hours, pending removal of the truck and its load of steel. Police said there was no damage in the mishap.

Albert F. Maag, 27, of 105 N. Wells St., Kingston, was taken to Nesbitt Hospital, Kingston, by the Tobyhanna ambulance, following a one-car accident on Route 80 near the 115 interchange at 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

Pocono Mountain School may feel budget impact

SWIFTWATER — The United States Bureau of the Budget's recent hard line stand to withhold $91 million in federal aid to impacted school districts could cause financial repercussions in the Pocono Mountain School District with the taxpayer hearing the brunt of increased real estate taxes.

The bureau froze the funds which were approved overwhelmingly by Congress last month.

The district is expecting $90,000 from the federal government this year through its impacted area program.

A school district qualifies as an impacted area after it has been certified that a certain percentage of children of federal employees is enrolled in the district.

Pocono Mountain has 450 of these pupils. The Tobyhanna Army Depot is by far the biggest employer of their parents.

Samuel A. Lee, administrative assistant at Pocono Mountain, feels confident the funds will be released. "The pressure from larger school districts, especially those in major cities, will be too much for the administration in Washington to bear," he said.

He added, however, that if the funds are withheld, it would be equivalent to three mills in real estate taxes.

Funds are received early in the calendar year with a second payment coming in the spring. Lee felt that there was still sufficient time for the arrival of the funds.

Pocono Mountain is the only district in Monroe County which receives impacted aid funds.

East Stroudsburg School District plans to seek aid under the same program in a few years as Tocks Island Dam and Delaware Water Gap National Recreational Area projects attract more federal employees and their families to the area.

Registration set for P.M. children

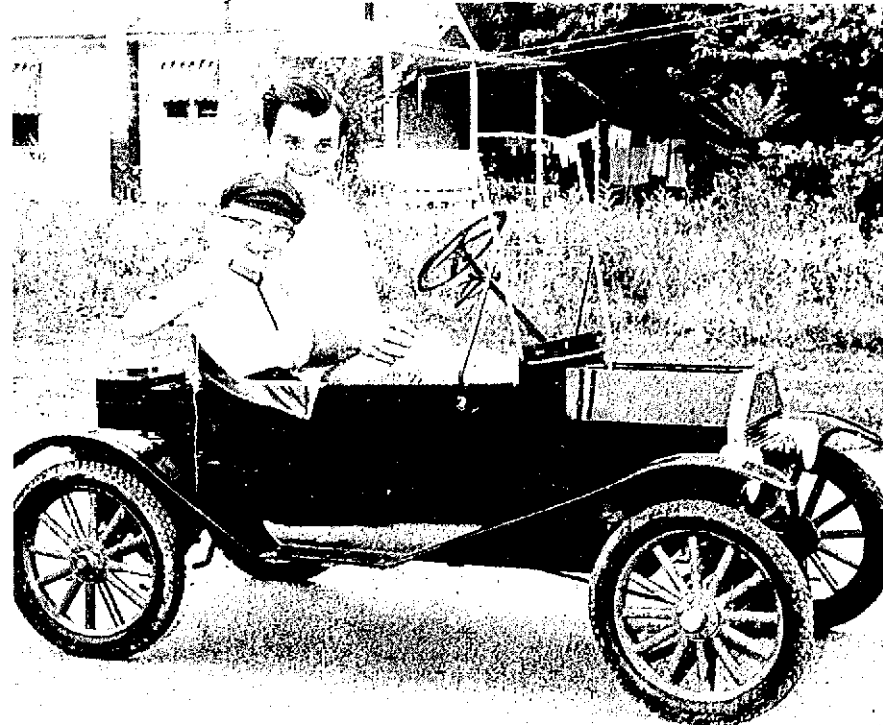

SWIFTWATER — The Pocono Mountain School District will hold registration for children of all new residents in the district according to the following schedule:

Pocono Mountain Junior-Senior High School, after Aug. 5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

After Aug. 19, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the following schools: Barrett Elementary Center, Cresco; Coolbaugh Elementary, Tobyhanna; Pocono Elementary, Tannersville and Tobyhanna Elementary, Pocono Lake.

Early registration of children will permit the district to obtain the student's records from the school previously attended.

For further information, the schools can be contacted at their various locations.

Health workshop lunch to be held at college

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Interagency Planning Committee of the Community School Health and Education Workshops will be conducting a special luncheon and orientation session today at noon.

The session will be held in the college dining hall of East Stroudsburg State College for representatives of all health and other community social service agencies.

The workshop is an accredited program of study given by ESSC as a 12-week summer session for students in the health and education field who work as special committees in determining the various community social services available and attempting to unify their efforts.

The program is directed by Dr. George F. Ockershausen who is also chairman of the Health Division at ESSC.

Ockershausen said that about 25 students have signed up for the course.

"The program has been active for five years and is now in its third year in association with the IAPC, Ockershausen said. A similar type program is sponsored at six other universities including Penn State, Pittsburgh, Lehigh, West Chester, Slippery Rock and Indiana State.

"We invite the various agencies and have them brief the students on what each of them offers in services and how they fit into the total community service picture. The students then schedule individual sessions to become more familiar with each agency," Dr. Ockershausen explained.

The students then become involved in coordinating and unifying the agencies' efforts. Through suggestion by the workshop, a social service directory of Monroe County was compiled and distributed July 1967 as a reference source for the community.

Dr. Ockershausen said that he usually arranges the first week of work. The students arrange and develop their own program for the following weeks. The workshop is conducted on an individual and a group basis of study.

Hill second in German Prix

Jackie Stewart leads from start to finish

ADENAU, Germany (UPI)—Scotland's Jackie Stewart defied atrocious weather conditions on the Nuerburgring track Sunday to score an overwhelming victory in the German and European Grand Prix in his French-American Matra-Ford.

Stewart drew steadily away from the field of 20 after the first lap of the tortuous circuit to finish as the unchallenged winner in 2 hours, 19:03.2 seconds, at an average speed of 87.37 miles per hour.

He was chased all the way by England's Graham Hill, in a Lotus Ford, but the former world champion never threatened to overhaul Stewart. Stewart finished more than three minutes ahead of Hill.

Third, only 200 yards behind Hill, was Jochem Rindt of Austria in a Brabham-Repco. Stewart's win enabled him to draw up into second place in the world drivers' championship with 26 points. Hill kept the lead, however, with 30 points.

Patches of fog swirled over the racing circuit and rain poured down throughout the race but Stewart never appeared troubled.

Conditions were so bad that the race was only allowed to take place after a special inspection by the organizers and Swedish race driver Joakim Bonnier, president of the Grand Prix Drivers Association.

Local experts dubbed Stewart the "fogmaster" after his win. He won the Dutch Grand Prix at Zandvoort earlier this year in similar conditions.

His car, a happy marriage of a French chassis and an American engine, ran perfectly throughout the race.

This year's race was one of the slowest Grand Prix ever. The snarling Formula One autos left clouds of spray in their wake and this, coupled with the driving rain and fog, made overtaking extremely hazardous.

Despite this, Stewart turned in a fantastic 9:36.0 minutes for the eighth lap.

The first casualty of the elements was the Cooper-BRM driven by England's Vic Elford. He skidded off the track and out of the race on the first lap, but escaped without injury.

One of the unluckiest drivers was New Zealander Chris Amon, who fought desperately to wrest second place from Hill in his Ferrari and spun off the track only two laps from the end.

Other drivers who gave up included Lucien Bianchi, the Belgian pilot of a Cooper-BRM, whose car developed a fuel leak, and Switzerland's Jo Siffert, whose Lotus Ford gave out after water entered the motor.

JACK O'BRIAN'S

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Bob Hope's son Kelly is off to Vietnam with an underwater demolition team. Hedy Lamarr's and John Loder's son Tony is a tray-slinger at Trudy Rockery. Debbie Reynolds & Harry put their Bel Air palace up for $600,000 (almost as much as Harry was clipped for in the front-paged Hollywood Friars Club card-cheating).

George Cukor will rub Bardot and Beatty together in the "Passionately" to see if he can invent film fire. Okay, what wise guy put up the sign "Fun City — Enter Here" at the 50th & 12th Ave. pier where folks ransom their towed-away cars.

Aforesaid Hedy Lamarr screamed second thoughts on releasing her lurid autobiography but she'll collect more than she made in any three films in her lifetime (half a mill). Hizzoner beats the bad-air conditioning problems at City Hall by conferring often in the nice cool 4th floor at police H.Q. In early TV, Tina Louise was a Jackie Gleason Gleam Girl, now plays his girl chum in Bob Hope's "How to Commit Marriage".

Movies we're not looking forward to: glorifications of Che Guevara. The late Joe Frisco's wardrobe and joke files were in the possession of the late publicist Frank Young who gave Joe storage room when his cash ran out. Within weeks, eight mags Time, Newsweek, Esq., Sports Ill., etc.) used negro covers; just a few riots ago Ebony was the only one.

None of the young GOPs at Miami so far have sported long hair or beards. The new Picasso House apartments on E. 58th St. commissioned Edward Fields to copy a Picasso as a rug; it's too chic for the floor — hangs on the lobby wall. Laraine Day's comeback is "The Name of the Game" TVseries. George Raft's having rough going.

Joan Fontaine answers all fan mail personally. So does Joan Crawford. Joan's the definitive all-time Hollywood Star and enjoys it; once she walked out of "21," looked up at the sunny sky and advised her chauffeur she would walk. "But madame," he warned, "You'll be mobbed." "Well," Joan replied, "I should certainly hope so!"

Lufthansa's analysis of what plane expansion will mean when it gets the new high-capacity jets (400-odd passengers): a 400 per cent expansion of its Kennedy Airport facilities. Virtually every airline now is either in the resort-hotel business all over the world or shortly will be; they've got to have rooms for the tourists they'll unload on foreign soil when the plane loads run close to 500 landing. Airline exec told us for every new large-load passenger plane added to any resort's schedule, "One new hotel must be built." The tourist business has only begun to expand; except in France, of course, where hotel and resort owners are screaming; good!

The gal ventriloquist in "George M" at the Palace, Angela Martin, wrote Michele Lee's record hit "L. David Sloane" ("Get off my back!" ... Have a note of constructive silliness: when Pearl Bailey and Cab Calloway leave "Hello, Dolly," if ever, have David Merrick change the title to "Hello, Molly" and star Molly Picon and Menasha Skulnick; we give it four Mogen

Dauids already. Only couple ever married in the Stork Club, the deejay Art Fords, will hold their anniversary party there next month — champagne and caviar at a table at the very spot the minister tied the knot — it's now a mini-park; meanwhile, the Fords expect their own new model in November. Mia's pals say she hinted Whoozis got the Mexican decree quietly.

Fasting on vacation

I heard a fool female complaining the other day because women were not allowed to travel into space with astronauts. After 14 days of "earth" travel with a maniac who wouldn't stop for food even when my vision became blurred and my tongue broke out in sores, I say forget it!

I can't visualize climbing into a space capsule with some clown who blasts off in the morning and says, "I want to make another 38 million miles before lunch. If we don't waste time eating, we could make Saturn by midnight."

Other women bear me out. As a friend was telling me the other day in the supermarket, "Honey, Gandhi is not dead! He's living here in the suburbs with his wife, three children and two weeks off a year to pursue his religion: fasting."

Just this last June we all climbed into the car at 5 a.m. in the morning with only a hard roll under our belts. Fred promised us we'd stop for a mid-morning pick-up. We did. He was a young serviceman returning to camp.

Stomach rumbling "Around noon our stomachs were rumbling like thunder before a summer shower. At 1 P.M. we nibbled on our seat belts and licked trading stamps from the glove compartment. One of the kids found a stick of gum under the floor mat. They got very ugly before Fred divided it."

At 2:45 the serviceman demanded to be released from the car. He said under terms of the Geneva Convention he had a right to receive an adequate diet ... enough to keep him alive."

"What did your husband say?" I asked.

"Oh Fred was smug, happy and looked exceedingly well fed ... like Bill Hoiden in Slag 17. The hungrier we got, the wittier he got. He had a snappy bit of patter for every eatery we passed."

"That place is a dump," he roared, "I hear the cockroaches send out for food. Look for a place where there are a lot of trucks."

"Later, 'How do you expect me to park with all those trucks in the way. Yell sooner! I can't stop this car going at 80 miles an hour on a dime, you know. We're on the wrong side of the road for that one. Remember it on the way back. We're not dressed for linen tablecloths."

"And finally, 'You people

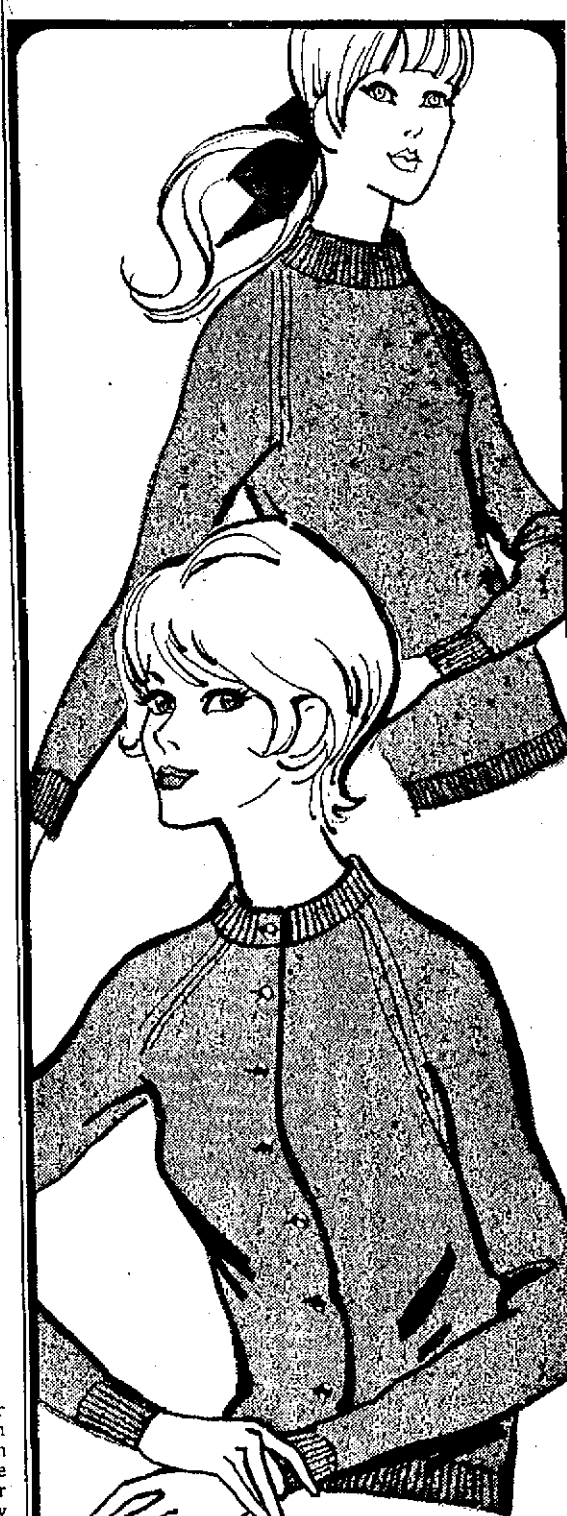

can't be that hungry, you're just bored."

"Finally, I could stand his remarks no longer. I grabbed him by the throat, 'Are you holding out on us, Fred? Did you have a vitamin shot back at that last service station?'

"Good Lord, woman," he said. "Get hold of yourself. Food isn't everything on a vacation!"

"I found a laxative square in the lining of my purse, rationed it to the kids in the back seat and ordered them to sit quietly and save their strength. They'd need it before the end of the day."

School bus inspection dates listed

STROUDSBURG — Dates for the annual school bus inspection in Monroe County have been set by the Pennsylvania State Police and announced by Walter H. Sebring, County Superintendent of Schools.

On Aug. 21, inspection will be from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the J. M. Hill School, East Broad St., East Stroudsburg. Inspection at Pocono Mountain High School, Swiftwater, will be Aug. 22 from 9 a.m. until noon. That afternoon, from 1:30 to 3, inspection will be held at Pleasant Valley High School, Brodheadsville.

Sebring requested that bus contractors make "every possible effort" to have the regular state inspection before the local bus inspections. He also asked that buses be washed and cleaned prior to inspection.

Tax sale of area properties listed

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County Treasurer Thomas Joyce announced Thursday the treasurer's tax sale of seated lands in the county as set for Aug. 17 at 9:30 a.m. in the county courthouse.

8 from Monroe at 4H Days

STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County 4H Club will be represented by eight members who will participate in demonstration and judging events during the 1968 State 4H Days at Penn State University, starting today and continuing to Wednesday.

Competing in the demonstrations will be Dean Vaughn on his poultry project, "Do your eggs make the grade?"; Sonia Melnikoff on home economics, "Jazzed-up Jeans"; Leslie Richardson, "The Appaloosa" and Al Kerick, "Milk and Milk Substitutes."

Compelling in horse judging will be, Eric Jensen, John Green, Sherill Snyder and Frank Christman.

The demonstrators were all winners of the County and District Demonstration Days. The judging candidates have all prepared themselves in the event with special classes conducted by Charles Hendry and his daughter, Heather, of Neola and are all members of the 4H Horse Club.

The group is to register at Pollock Dining Hall this afternoon. Then come individual meetings, an assembly and an entertainment program at Schwab Auditorium in the evening.

All judging, demonstrations and public speaking contests begin Tuesday morning and continue through the day. Recreational events will be open in the afternoon.

Wednesday morning participants will be recognized during the final assembly program and depart for home.

Ann Lott, assistant county agent accompanying the group

explains that the event is conducted for the purpose of providing 4H members an opportunity to judge, demonstrate or participate in public speaking at a state-wide event for recognition, to learn from other 4H members, for seeing modern research in action and for chances to participate in inter-state and national events.
